

SKOKOMISH HIGHWAY 101 CORRIDOR MASTER PLAN

SKOKOMISH, WASHINGTON

SKOKOMISH TRIBE

The corridor master plan for Skokomish, Washington, establishes a framework for new community and economic development along U.S. Highway 101.

Following an economic assessment of appropriate business enterprise, Jones & Jones prepared land use and design concepts for the community and business core. This plan also includes recommendations for pedestrian and vehicle circulation, parking, architectural character, open space enhancements and environmental mitigation.

FACTS

Land use and design concepts for:

- commercial development
- government office facilities
- new community and education center
- housing

BENEFITS

Meets community needs for:

- effective local government
- social services
- commercial enterprise

Stronger identity for business core

Development in harmony with environment

Cohesive architectural character

Safe, healthy community

JONES  JONES

ARCHITECTS
LANDSCAPE ARCHITECTS
PLANNERS